John Warland from Flemons Warland, conceptual garden designers, contacted us and talked us through his idea for the Badger Beer garden at the 2012 Hampton Court Flower Show.

As soon as he suggested creating a bar, we immediately thought of creating a 'wall of crates' incorporating the Badger Beer logo. We were keen as a team to try this because we had never done it before and Jon was very attracted because it would give him a stand out feature for the show.

We were delighted by the completed wall and it really demonstrates another capability of our PlantaboxHD services.

"The garden was designed as a walk in the countryside with Badger beer, ending in a classic village country garden for a tasting session. Hence the cricket pavillion, straw bales, bunting, barrel tables etc. We also showcased the best of countryside crafts with drystone walling and contemporary willow work. The Plantabox crates were the perfect fit for the sampling area, blending seamlessly and allowing understated use of branding within an RHS show garden."
